

Wadsworth Control Systems is monitoring the evolving situation with the Coronavirus (COVID-19), and its potential impact on our customers.

Our primary focus is the health, welfare and safety of our team members, and we have business continuity and contingency plans in place in the event of widespread outbreak.

School closure in Colorado was our trigger to implement the first phase of employees who are able to work remotely. This will go into place on Monday.

Wadsworth's technical support team will remain available.

We have put a travel ban in place for all Wadsworth employees. We will be using technology and digital tools to conduct meetings virtually rather than in person.

Currently, our production team remains fully operational, and we have strategies in place to adjust operations, if necessary, to further safeguard our team.

We will continue to monitor the situation and communicate updates both through the website and email.

We remain committed to providing a best-in-class experience and supporting you as you evaluate the potential impacts to your businesses.

If you have specific questions, please contact your Wadsworth Control Systems account manager.
